WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (Dec. 8, 2021) – What can an ante-bellum card table, an 18th-century engraving, and a sampler sewn by a 6-year-old schoolgirl tell a modern audience about the moral codes of the past? Join internationally-renowned curators, conservators, collectors, and scholars at Colonial Williamsburg’s 74th Annual Antiques Forum to find out. This year’s conference, offered both in-person and online from Feb. 25 – Mar. 1, 2022, will focus on the themes of virtue and vice by exploring the many ways that the ceramics, furniture, metals, paintings, prints and textiles of the 18th and 19th centuries exemplify the societal evolution of ethics.

“Our material possessions speak volumes about the moral codes we adhere to, as individuals and collectively as a society. That’s just as true today as it was hundreds of years ago,” said Ronald L. Hurst, Colonial Williamsburg Carlisle H. Humelsine chief curator and vice president for museums, preservation, and historic resources. “The 2022 Annual Antiques Forum will challenge common perceptions of virtue and vice in the 18th and 19th centuries. And it might make us think twice about what our own possessions will say about us one day.”

Guest presenter highlights include:

- Returning guest-speaker Mike Rendell on the virtue and vice of the Georgian Court in the private and public sector.
- Metropolitan Museum of Art Associate Curator Wolf Burchard exploring the Georgian monarchy between enlightenment and empire.
- The BBC’s Antique Roadshow’s Lars Tharp combining his expertise on ceramics with an exploration of William Hogarth’s famous depictions of prostitutes and ne’er-do-wells.
- Leslie B. Grigsby, senior curator of ceramics and glass at Winterthur, on ceramics and glass made for pure enjoyment.
- Lea Lane, curator of collections for Preservation Virginia, on carved tobacco pipes.
- University of Delaware and the Smithsonian Institute’s Ken Cohen on billiards and early American democracy.
- Tyson Distinguished Scholar of the Crystal Bridges Museum Carrie Barratt analyzing virtue, vice and solace in American art.
- Independent curator William Sargent on Chinese export art.
- Scott Stephenson, president and CEO of the Museum of the American Revolution, on espionage and powder horns.
- Bly Straube, senior curator of the Jamestown-Yorktown Foundation, examining Catholic iconography from the early English settlement of Jamestown.
- Philadelphia Museum of Arts curator David Barquist on silver and religion in the Americas.
